

I am very concerned about the possible further relaxation of radio and television station ownership rules currently under consideration by the F.C.C. . I believe that this is a bad idea and will truly be a disservice to the listening and viewing public. By allowing editorial control of information that is broadcast over the nation's airwaves into the hands of fewer individuals and organizations, our citizens as a whole will have a lesser voice. Placing ownership in fewer hands will also limit the options available for advertisers to pursue their potential customers in the marketplace. Our nation is one that promotes inclusion and the embrace of diverse views and talents. By limiting access to public airwaves, fewer of these voices will be heard.
